Provided for your info.

During the removal of the LH exhaust module a lump of Stainless Steel fell out. On investigation the steel was found to have come from the LH sliding fairing track.

The SS strap is fitted to the fairing tracks as a repair for wear at the roller points. The strap detached from the tracks due to the excessive wear on the mounting spigots allowing the sliding fairing to move about during flight.

The SS strap was ingested into the #1 engine and went through the IPS duct causing damage as it made its way through.
